Judith SIMONS	Margaret SWINTON William S. (b:1775) ? another daughter	Edinburgh, Midlothian, Scot. Plantation: Colleton County South Carolina, USA;	1705: bapt. of Hugh with by Sir Hugh Cunningham of Craigend, late Lord Provost of Edinb., David Monroe of Ryne & Alexander Cunningham, son of Sir Hugh C. c1722: Went to South Carolina, USA went brother his William, "the surveyor". He settled on a large grant of land in Colleton Co., S.C. 1735: Mr John Stewart came to S.C. to practice surgery. Being without money & starving he lived with the Rev. Hugh Stewart for some time. Rev. Hugh Stewart introduced him to William Swinton "the surveyor" who bought him a house. William recommended John to his brother Hugh Swinton who had a large stock of medicines & medical instruments. Hugh set him up in a shop in Georgetown, S.C. Hugh Swinton had to go to Charlestown, returning after a month to find talk of a relationship between his wife and John. In her father's hearing, Hugh's daughter said to John Stewart "Doctor you can't sleep along with Mama in Papa's bed now Papa's come home". Confused & tired, Hugh threw himself on his bed. As he lay there Stewart offered to bleed him (contary to practice in such cases). Suspecting Stewart might prick an artery, Hugh refused. Hugh's wife came in crying, but then going into the hall was seen by Hugh, smiling at Stewart. He then went into the field & complained at the lack of work done by the slaves in his absence. He was told that the reason was the frequent absences of his wife with Stewart in a canoe where they were seen hugging & kissing. The house servants also confirmed their 'immodest' behaviour. Hugh's wife denied these accusations, threatening the negroes that they would be burned for telling lies. The next day she confessed that John Stewart had behaved towards her in a "vile, base, and ungrateful manner, and had attempted to debauch her by ridiculing revealed religion and had adversely criticised Hugh" While they were on a walk Stewart had leveled a pistol at her and then jumped upon her, but she had been rescued by some negroes. Next Hugh tackled Stewart about these allegations. Stewart confessed that he deserved death for his actions, then in the height of rage, Hugh cut off one of Stewart's ears. Later he had Stewart carried into his house and at his own expense, employed a surgeon to cure him. Some 20 days later Hugh gave Stewart a horse and provisions plus a guide to send him to Virginia. Stewart got as far as Cape Clear, S.C. & decided to stay there and pursue his practice. Later Stewart contracted the "fever" occasioned by drinking and died. Richard Wright, Chief Justice of South Carolina, had now issued a warrant for Hugh Swinton's arrest, claiming that the crime of cutting off an ear was punishable by death. Knowing that the evidence of negroes was not acceptable in his defense, Hugh decided to go to England in order to ask the King's mercy rather than surrender himself for trail. In 1737 he filed a petition in London. The petition was referred on 19 April, 1738 to the Attorney-General for his opinion. His uncle, Hugh Swinton (bro. of William 'the surveyor') took him to London, England and left him in the care his aunt, Magdaline Stewart. Magdaline Stewart took over his upbringing & education, giving him the benefit of English Grammar Schools, then he went on to graduate from Edin. Uni. He bought with him horses, servants and all the necessary items for a gentlemans establishment, expecting a fortune, but when he arrived he found no fortune. The executors of his fathers estate, swindling it and neglecting his brother & sister. The executors, got possession of the whole estate, which was extensive, except for one plantation, the homestead, which his brother Alexander secured, and some blocks of land in Georgetown which Margaret secured with the aid of her aunt (? or cousin), Hannah. He found that 2 of the 3 executors were dead, and the 3rd, William Flemming, availing himself of the favourable circumstances, had sold all the available part of the immense amount of property left by his father (William), and had left (fled) for England taking the money. 1763: He was married at Jacksonboro by the Rev. Mr Barron. He was reserved & reticent by nature, & with his expected fortune gone he became morose. After married, his sister, Margaret came to live with them and resided there until her death. In later life, when questioned by a daughter about her ancestors, his answer was always "you have no reason to be ashamed of them, but as you have no inheritance or fortune, it behooves us to be silent!".
